ABNER DANIEL

By... WILL N. HARBEN

"Their disapproval of the old man's effort to hurry Providence could not have been better shown than in the failure of them all to comment on the rascally conduct of the Atlanta lawyer. They even chuckled over that part of the incident. To their minds Perkins was a sort of faroff personification of a necessary evil, who, like the devil himself, was evidently created to show mortals their limitations.

The Rev. Charles B. Dole, a tall, spare man of sixty, who preached the first, second, third and fourth Sundays of each month in four different meeting houses within a day's ride of Bishop's, came around as the guest of the farmhouse as often as his circuit would permit. He was called the "fightin' preacher" because he had had several fearless hand to hand encounters with certain moonshiners whose conduct he had ventured to call ungodly because unlawful.

On the second Saturday after Bishop's mishap, as Dole was to preach the next day at Rock Crest meeting house, he rode up as usual and turned his horse into the stable and fed him with his own hands. Then he joined Abner Daniel on the veranda. Abner had seen him ride up and purposely buried his head in his newspaper to keep from offering to take the horse, for Abner did not like the preacher "any to hurt," as he would have put it.

Dole did not care much for Abner either. They had engaged in several doctrinal discussions in which the preacher had waxed furious over some of Daniel's views, which he described as decidedly unorthodox. Daniel had kept his temper beautifully and had the appearance of being amused through it all, and this Dole found harder to forgive than anything Abner had said.

"You all have had some trouble, I hear, since I saw you last," said the preacher as he sat down and began to wipe his perspiring brow with a big handkerchief.

"Well, I reckon it might be called that," Abner replied as he carefully folded his newspaper and put it into his coat pocket. "None of us was expectin' it, an' it sorter busted our calculations. Alf had laid out to put new high back benches in Rock Crest, an' new lamps an' one thing another, an' it seems to me—Abner wiped his too facile mouth—"like I heard 'im say one day that you wasn't paid enough for yore thunder an' that he'd stir around an' see what could be done." Abner's eyes twinkled. "But, lawdy me! I reckon of he kin possibly raise the seeds to pay the tax on his investment next year he'll do all the Lord expects."

"Huh, I reckon," grunted Dole, irritated, as usual, by Abner's double meaning. "I take it that the Lord hasn't got much to do with human speculations one way or other."

"Ef I jist had that scamp that roped 'im in before me a minute, I'd fix 'im," said Abner. "Do you know what denomination Perkins belongs to?"

"No, I don't," Dole blurted out, "an', what's more, I don't care."

"Well, I acknowledge it sorter interests me," went on our philosopher in an inscrutable tone, "because, Brother Dole, you kin often trace a man's good or bad doin's to his belief in Bible matters. Maybe you don't remember Jabe Lyman that told Thad Wilson's stump suckin' boss an' was ketchin' ap' put up. I was at the courthouse in Darley when he received his sentence. His wife sent me to 'im to carry his pipe an' one thing or other—a pair of socks an' other necessary tricks, a little can o' lye soap, for one thing. She hadn't the time to go, as she said she had a patch o' young corn to hoe out. I found 'im as happy as ef he was goin' off on a excursion. He laughed an' 'lowed it ud be some time 'fore he got back, an' I wondered what could 'a' made 'im so contented, so I made some inquiries on that line. I found that he was a firm believer in predestination an' that what was to be was fore-ordained. He said that he firmly believed he was predestinated to go to the coal mines for hoss stealin', an' that life was too short to be kickin' ag'in the Lord's way o' runnin' matters. Besides, he said, he'd heard that they issued a plug o' tobacco a week to chawin' prisoners, an' he could prove that he was one o' that sort of they'd look how he'd ground his jaw teeth down to the gums."

"Huh," grunted Dole again, his sharp gray eyes on Abner's face as if he half believed that some of his own theories were being sneered at. It was true that he, being a Methodist, had not advocated a belief in predestination, but Abner Daniel had on more than one occasion shown a decided tendency to bunch all stringent religious opinions together and cast them down as out of date. When in doubt in a conversation with Abner, the preacher assumed a coldness on the outside that was often not consistent with the fires within him. "I don't see what all that's got to do with Brother Bishop's mistake," he said frigidly as he leaned back in his chair.

"It sets me to wonderin' what denomination Perkins belongs to, that's all," said Abner, with another smile. "I know in reason he's a big like in some church in Atlanta, fer I never knowed a lawyer that wasn't foremost in that way o' doin' good. I'll bet a hockake he belongs to some hifalutin' crowd o' worshippers that kneel down on soft cushions an' believe in scopin' in all they kin in the Lord's name, an' that charity begins at home. I think that myself, Brother Dole, fer this never was a plant as hard to git rooted as charity is, an' a body ought to have it whar they kin watch it close. It'll die a heap o' times ef you jist look at it, an' it mighty nigh always has had soil ur a drought to contend with."

Jist then Pole Baker, who has already been introduced to the reader, rode up to the fence and hitched his horse. He nodded to the two men on the veranda and went around to the smokehouse to get a piece of bacon Bishop had promised to sell him on credit.

"Huh!" Dole grunted, and he crossed his long legs and swung his foot up and down nervously. He had the look of a man who was wondering why such insufferable bores as Abner should so often accompany a free dinner. He had never felt drawn to the man, and it irritated him to think that just when his mental faculties needed rest Abner always managed to introduce the very topics which made it necessary for him to keep his wits about him.

"Take that feller thar," Abner went on, referring to Baker. "He's about the hardest customer in this county, an' yet he's been managed right now. He's got a wife an' seven children an' is a holy terror when he gets drunk. He used to be the biggest daredevil moonshiner in all these mountains, but Alan kept befriendin' 'im jist one way an' another tell he ud one day an' axed Alan what he cud do fer 'im. Alan ain't none o' yore shoutin' kind o' Christians. He shakes a nimble toe at a shindig when he wants an' knows the ace from a ten-spot, but he gits thar with every claw in the air when some'n has to be done." So when Pole axed 'im that Alan jist said, as quiet as ef he was axin' 'im fer a match to light a cigar, "Quit yore moonshinin', Pole." That was all he said. Pole looked 'im straight in the eye fer a minute an' then said: "Alan Bishop, you don't mean that?"

"Yes, I do, Pole," said Alan. "Quit! Quit smack off!"

"You ax that as a favor?" said Pole.

"Yes, as a favor," said Alan. "An' you are a-goin' to do it too!"

"Then Pole begun to contend with 'im. 'You are a-axin' that bec'ase you think I'll be ketchin' up with,' he said, 'but I tell you the ain't no man on the face o' the earth that could find my still now. You could stand in two feet of the door to it all day an' not find it if you looked fer it with a spyglass. I kin make bug juice all the rest o' my life an' sell it without bein' ketchin'."

"I want you to give it up," said Alan, an' Pole did. It was like pullin' an eye-tooth, but Pole yanked it out. Alan is workin' on 'im now to git 'im to quit liquor, but that ain't so easy. He could walk a crack with a gallon sloshin' about in 'im. Now, as I started to say, Alan ain't got no out an' dried denomination an' don't have to walk any particular kind o' foot log to do his work, but it's a-goin' on jist the same. Now I don't mean no reflection on yore way o' hitehin' wings on folks, but I do believe you could preach yore sermons—such as they are—in Pole Baker's years till Gabriel blowed his lungs out, an' Pole'd still be moonshinin'." An' sometimes I think that sell fellers as Alan Bishop ort to be paid fer what they do in betterin' the world. I don't see why you fellers ort always to be allowed to rake in the jack pot unless you'd accomplish more'n outsiders that jist turn the'r hands to the job at odd times."

Dole drew himself up straight and glared at the offender.

"I think that is a rather personal remark, Brother Daniel," he said coldly. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Too Patriotic.

Patrick had worked hard all his days, but his sons had spent his money for him, and when he was too old for active work he was offered the position of crossing-tender at a small railway station. He looked dubious as the duties of the office were explained to him, and the meaning of the various flags was clearly stated. "In case of danger, with a train coming, of course you wave the red flag," said his friend, proceeding with his explanation. A hard old hand grasped his arm: "Man, dear, it'll never do," said Patrick, shaking his head solemnly. "I could never trust meself to remember to wave a red flag whin there was a green wan handy."

TUBERCULOSIS

Important Report Made to the Berlin Medical Society.

Experiments Made in Infecting Calves—Result Upheld Koch's Theory.

Berlin, July 17.—Berlin Medical society assembled to hear Prof. Kossel, of the Imperial health office, report the results of the prolonged experiments of the tuberculosis commission in infecting calves with human tuberculosis. Prof. Koch's observations, prior to the celebrated London address caused the health office to appoint the commission to make systematic experiments. Yesterday's paper was in the nature of a preliminary report.

The commission's investigations cover three forms of introducing tubercle bacilli in calves; first, subcutaneous injection; second, in food; third, by inhalation. The preliminary report covers only the first form, but the experiments with the other forms continue.

The commission decided to attempt the inoculation of calves, not with matter taken directly from human victims, but with cultures made therefrom. The experiment covered thirty-nine separate cultures, twenty-three adults and sixteen from children. The results were that nineteen calves subcutaneously treated did not show the slightest effect; nine showed after four months the slightest changes of condition, and seven showed more marked symptoms, but the propagation of tuberculosis in the body did not occur. On the other hand four inoculations from tuberculosis children infected calves with a disease which resembled a weak type of animal consumption, and two of this number died from tuberculosis.

The commission summarized as follows:

"The series of experiments strengthens Prof. Koch's view that animal consumption as the cause of human consumption does not play the role generally attributed to it, but definitive judgment requires further experimentation."

In the discussion which followed Prof. Orth, the late Prof. Virchow's successor, strongly combatted the view that human and animal consumption were dissimilar and non-transferrable.

GETS WORSE

TOM TYNER ALSO WANTED IN CADIZ.

The Cadiz Record of yesterday says: Tom L. Tyner, son of Capt. Tyner of the steamer Butterff, who is wanted in Paducah for forgery, worked M. H. Jagoe of this city for $10 while here a few days ago. The check was drawn on the Fourth National bank of Nashville, made payable to Tom L. Tyner, and signed by Tyner & Echehard. Mr. Jagoe endorsed the check and the money was procured from the Cadiz bank. It was returned by the Nashville bank as a forgery.

Legal steps have been taken and the young man will no doubt be punished if caught.

CURES SCIATICA.

Rev. W. L. Riley, LL.D., Cuba, N. Y., writes: "After fifteen days of excruciating pain from sciatic rheumatism, under various treatments, I was induced to try Ballard's Snow Liniment, the first application giving my first relief, and the second entire relief. I can give it unqualified recommendation. 25c, 50c and $1 at DuBois, Kolb & Co.

CABOOSE WRECKED

SMALL WRECK AT FULTON THIS MORNING.

There was a small wreck at Fulton this morning, when a light engine ran into the rear end of a freight train and smashed up a caboose. The caboose was thrown across the track and the local wrecking outfit was sent down to clear the debris up. No one was reported injured.
